pdf, .wma, and .jpegs can be used on a CD-ROM) and has been produced in Germany by DJ Intelligent. The application contains a collection of over 300 of the world's most famous music tracks, including six Grammy Award-winning recordings. Not only this is possible with the now included MIDI recording facility (only available in the full version), but the audio tracks are synchronized with the MIDI recordings. This means that the full version of Jaliya V4 offers the best quality to listen to or to use to learn to play West African music in comparison to most other software available. Features Jaliya V4 contains the world's largest selection of original West African rhythm tracks and recordings. You can browse through the music tracks (including their audio versions), play them in the sample player, perform them with a MIDI instrument, and listen to the recorded sound of the MIDI instrument. The user is also given the possibility to mix and match tracks, change the pitches and tempos of tracks, as well as the timing of the timing of the tempo changes. To learn West African music instruments you can have the choice of six different African music instrument models with the following characteristics: Western Bongo, Bembe, Ekiten, Hand Bell, Chien and Zikora. To use the MIDI instruments, the application includes the three most common ways of playing MIDI instruments: Keyboard, Hands-on Keyboard, and the embedded real-time MIDI control panel. History Jaliya V4 was originally developed in Germany as a software project for the University of Osnabruck. It was written by five students. The core of the software development was laid in about half a year. Because it was designed for the students of Osnabruck, it was relatively inexpensive. The project was stopped after this student work year. The rights of the software were sold to a South African production company, ART4, which registered the product for South Africa and started to develop a South African version. After two months of development, ART4 came to an agreement with DJ Intelligent to produce and distribute the Jaliya V4 product internationally. Jaliya V4 was given the name by the company DJ Intelligent and the first release is called Jaliya V4 Gold. After about a year of development, another version, Jaliya V4 Professional, was released. This version has a collection of over 1000 songs and the user interface has been 82157476af
